

WHITE WILL PROBE DISTRESS IN STATE

SOUTHERN OHIO TO BE HELPED PLANS REPORT

Health Director Sends
Two Members of Staff
In Drought Districts

HOLD CONFERENCES
Bill for Immediate Relief
Is Now Pending

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2.—Governor White today began an investigation of health conditions in drought-stricken southern Ohio.

State Health Director H. G. Southard dispatched two members of his staff into suffering counties to determine the extent of distress.

Dr. W. P. Johnson was ordered to make a study of communicable diseases in the drought areas and learn whether illness is being alarmingly increased.

C. S. Slade, assistant engineer in the health department, was ordered to investigate water and milk now available in the hard-hit sections.

SUBMIT REPORTS
Daily reports will be submitted to Dr. Southard and the governor. The investigation will be carried into Jefferson, Scioto, Adams, Brown, Belmont, Hocking, Noble, Pike, Washington, Athens, Jackson, Meigs and Monroe counties.

Conferences with local authorities to learn whether state assistance is required are planned as a part of the investigation program.

Launching of the health probe came almost simultaneously with a meeting of the governor's emergency relief and employment cabinet.

The cabinet met with Mr. White this morning to discuss what relief steps, if any, the state executive department ought to take.

Since his inauguration the governor has taken the stand that he wants to know definitely the extent of suffering before proceeding with any expenditure of state funds.

HAS CONFERENCES
Conferences with State Welfare Director John McSweeney, Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson, Highway Director O. W. Merrill, Red Cross officials, Director of Education John L. Clifton and state charities workers are expected to give the governor the information he wants.

Consideration of a bill to provide immediate relief for school children in need of clothing was taken up at today's meeting.

Senator J. G. Lowery (R), of New Concord, is eager to introduce the bill, which already has been in form for more than a week, but is delaying until he learns whether the governor approves.

His bill would give the state department of education $100,000 with which to buy shoes and clothing for children whose parents are unable to supply the need. The department of education already has exhausted $15,000 granted to meet the same emergency during November and December.

Today's health investigation was started to verify reports of starvation and extreme suffering in southern counties.

Groundhog Story Is Recited Again

The old, old bed-time story about the good Mr. Groundhog who went out to look at his shadow was told again today but in a different way. Mr. Groundhog in this vicinity did not need to await the coming of daybreak to see his shadow for anytime after midnight he could have ventured from his winter home to discover his shadow following him in the moonlight.

According to the people who tell bed-time stories over radios and elsewhere this Mr. Groundhog hops out of his hole, and if he sees his shadow he hibernates for six weeks more, my children.

But if he does not see his shadow it will be nice and spring-like. Wonder what would happen if Mr. Groundhog suddenly decided he was not afraid of his shadow.

JUDGE CITES CITIZENS FOR CRIME IN U. S.

Florence E. Allen Says

SCORES OFFICIALS
Says Job-holders Consider
Positions Personal

Assailing the public official who thinks his position is a personal one and the official who can't say 'no' to his friends, Florence E. Allen, judge of the Ohio supreme court, addressed a filled audience at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening at a combined meeting of Presbyterians, Methodists and others.

Judge Allen, in an excellent speaking voice, used as the subject of her address, "He who can't say 'no' is better than he who takes the city." After asking a number of questions one of which was: "What is the supreme purpose in life?" which she discussed briefly.

Judge Allen blamed citizens of the nation for their indifference to government for present crime conditions which now exist. She said: "We need to go back to the teachings of our forefathers in the matter of dealing with government. Years ago citizens did not permit the government of the community and the nation to fall into the hands of undesirables. Decent men, law-abiding citizens, do not go to the polls and do not take any interest in the trend of government."

OHIO BAPTIST CHURCHES TO MEET IN TWO-DAY SESSION

COLUMBUS, O.—Pastors and laymen representing the 450 or more Baptist churches in Ohio will hold a two-day conference in the First Baptist Church here, beginning today morning to discuss with Albert W. Beaven, Rochester, N. Y., President of the denomination, and W. H. Bowler, National Executive, New York, newly devised plans for financing Baptist work in Ohio during the next fiscal year, beginning May 1st. Ohio Baptists, records show, contribute close to $2,000,000 annually for this purpose.

The two officials will conduct a series of intensive training periods in the technique of the plan, which is known as the "community every-member canvass," and is said to be something entirely new in the field of church finance. It was conceived on a national scale and is being carried out on a state-wide basis, with some 30 states, out of the 35 in Northern Baptist territory, already engaged in preparatory work such as is being carried out in Ohio. Northern Baptists, it is pointed out, are faced annually with the task of raising $33,000,000 and it is expected by the community canvass to underwrite the entire amount at $400,000 during the week of April 12 to 19.

Each church in the past, it is explained, has been forced to face its own financial problems alone. Under the new plan, however, Baptist congregations will unite in urban and rural community groups, and after some eight weeks of intensive preparation, seek, during a week's canvass, to secure a pledge from each church member for a share in the local quota. The community aspect of the plan makes it possible for the weaker churches to benefit by the moral support of the stronger, and by the organizing ability of a picked group upon whose assistance they can rely in carrying out the details of the work.

In projecting the community canvass, some of the methods used in financial drives during times of national emergency are used. Among them are the organization of a directing committee, with a leading citizen as chairman, the stimulation by various means of Baptist interest and enthusiasm for the local objectives, such as the joint financial goals for church up-keep and the wider field of missionary endeavor, the use of four-minute speakers and the special training of canvassers. The plan is said to differ, however, from the usual money-raising drive in that each church is restricted to the solicitation of its own membership.

The new plan was originated at Baptist headquarters in New York about two years ago and tried out experimentally last spring in several cities and rural districts, with it is said, phenomenal success. Dr. A. W. Beaven is regarded as a world authority on church organization and finance, upon which subjects he has written widely. He was for 20 years, pastor of Lake Avenue Church, Rochester, N. Y., to which he went as a young man, when the church, housed in an inadequate, long-outdated building, was said to be in a moribund condition. Today it is looked upon as one of the strongest churches in America, with a membership of 3,000 and an annual money raising capacity of $125,000. Last year Dr. Beaven resigned to become President of the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, Rochester, N. Y.

Dr. Beaven holds strong views as to the relationship of the church to modern social conditions. It is his belief that most churches are conducted along lines which have long been obsolete, and that too many pastors cling plausibly to the belief that what was good enough for their fathers' is good enough for them. He believes that a church which meets the requirements of modern conditions is a tangible investment to any community, even in the terms of real estate, since, he contends, no respectable man would live and rear a family in a churchless town.

The conference will be under the direction of E. R. Fitch, Director of Promotion for the Ohio Baptist State Convention, Granville.

SLACKER TREES CUT INCOME OF WOODS

By following a plan in cutting firewood, ties, or fence posts, the farm woodlot may be improved and the future income from this source greatly increased, states E. G. Wieschuegel, forester at the Ohio State University.

To help in improving growth conditions in the woodlot, he says, it is well to divide the woods in four or ten areas of about equal size and to harvest the ripe trees in one portion of the woods each year.

When cutting fire wood or posts it is a good idea to remove trees having broken tops and trees whose stems are fire-scarred and show signs of decay. Slow growing trees should be removed and their faster growing neighbors allowed to develop under the best possible conditions.

It is well also to remove large crooked trees, and small trees, with bushy tops that grow beneath the older trees, shade the ground, and prevent good young trees from establishing themselves. Also, according to Wieschuegel, grape vines choke the tree and their removal will be beneficial.

A good individual of a poor species should be retained in preference to a defective individual of good species and it is always best to try to produce a stand of straight, tall, well groomed trees that are sound and free from disease.

Strange Contrast At Turkey Shoot

A strange contrast was presented at Aurora, O., recently with the atmosphere of 1830 carried out in decorations, costumes and events of a turkey shoot, but with these events directed by a modern public address system.

This broadcasting device, installed by The Ohio Bell Telephone Company, consisted of a microphone similar to that used in radio and four loud speakers placed at advantageous points about the grounds. Announcements were audible simultaneously to all of the 4,000 persons assembled.

About 30,000 Bell Telephones are connected or disconnected on the average each working day.

Approximately 17,000 linemen and linemen's helpers are employed by the Bell System.

In 1929, American farmers bought 7,914,688 tons of commercial fertilizers and wasted more than that amount of manure.

EXPLAINS WAYS TO COOK DRIED FRUIT

Delicious yet simple and inexpensive dishes that add a pleasant variety to winter meals are easy to make from dried fruits if a few rules are followed in their preparation, believes Miss Alma Garvin, extension specialist in home economics at the Ohio State University.

In preparing dried fruits, such as raisins, prunes, apples and peaches, it is best to soak them in warm water for at least 24 hours and to simmer them about 25 minutes, she says.

Sauces having a multitude of uses may be made by combining various dried fruits in order to obtain different flavors. Many people enjoy shortcakes made by using such sauces over cakes made from biscuit dough which is prepared by mixing together and baking 2 cups of flour, 1-2 teaspoonful of baking powder, 1-2 teaspoonful of salt, 2 or 3 tablespoonfuls of fat, and about 2-3 of a cup of milk. Instead of cooking the fruit as a sauce it may be mashed, spread over the cakes, and topped with whipped cream or a few nuts.

Delicious desserts may also be made by using dried fruits in custards and puddings, Miss Garvin says. Sandwich fillings prepared by mixing together equal portions of dried apricots and raisins are good, and add a bit of variety to the picnic, school lunch box, social, or afternoon tea.

Candy can be made by combining dried prunes, raisins, and apricots which are then run through the food chopper, cut into squares, and rolled in sugar. In making this confection, she states, the dried fruits are not cooked or soaked, but used dry just as they are purchased.

By cooling dried fruits, such as prunes and dates, with the breakfast cereal they may be made to add an appetizing touch to this first meal of the day. They may also be used to advantage in salads.

OHIO LIVESTOCK NUMBERS SHIFTING

Ohio farmers are raising fewer hogs this year than for any year since 1914, and the number of sheep on farms is less than in eight years, according to the January livestock report of the federal crop reporting board available to the department of rural economies at the Ohio State University.

There has been a slight increase in the number of cows and heifers kept for milk purposes. The total number is now 945,000, which is 2 per cent greater than for January a year ago. For the United States the number of dairy cows and heifers kept for milk has increased slightly more than 2 per cent, according to the report. Along with the slightly increased number of dairy cattle in Ohio there has occurred a tumble in the estimated average value of cows in the state. In January 1930 Ohio cows were valued at $72 a head by the federal government; now a value of $46.20 is placed upon them.

Although the Ohio sheep population declined 4 per cent over the year, the state still leads all states east of the Missouri River in total numbers. The sheep population is now slightly more than 2,000,000. The estimated average value of all sheep has declined from $8.50 to $4.60.

The number of swine, including pigs, in Ohio dropped slightly below 2,000,000, a decrease of 3 per cent. The number in the United States dropped 2 per cent. The value of swine per head, dropped less than the values for other classes of livestock. Average value in January, 1930 was $12.30 a head; in 1931, $10 a head.

Some good places to plant black walnut seed are benches, slopes along steep ravines, fence rows, or open patches in thin woodlands. Walnut seed should not be planted on thin, sterile, worn out soils, or on extremely heavy wet clays.

Recent estimates indicate that about half of the farmers in Ohio own tractors.

PRISON SYSTEM IS CURSED BY OVERCROWDING SAYS THOMAS

Overcrowding is the curse of the Ohio prison system, according to Warden F. E. Thomas, warden of the Columbus State Penitentiary, where over 300 prisoners died in fire and smoke a year ago. The lessons of that disaster, which have not yet been thoroughly learned by the penal authorities, are summarized in an interview with Warden Thomas.

"I am convinced that the best prison method is to house and work men in small units, away from cities in fresh open air," declares the warden. "Crowding and jumbling of prisoners of all ages and conditions is the curse of our system. That and poor parole systems lead to prison unrest and certainly hinder the reform of the prisoner. In Ohio we have a parole board of two men—good men; but two is insufficient for a fair consideration of cases."

"Our prisoners are paid better five cents an hour—than most states; but I believe that internal conditions are really secondary to external surroundings, although that sounds paradoxical. Away from the city where there's fresh air and a chance for work in the open air—preferably on farms—is the only satisfactory place for a state prison."

Warden Thomas speaks with the authority of one who has been in his present charge for 17 years and in penology for 26. He came to the Ohio penitentiary in the days when it housed both men and women prisoners and conditions were intolerable. He has made many changes for the better but fate caught up with him in the greatest disaster in prison history.

"There'll be periodical trouble in our prisons so long as the public imagine they shut men out of society when they merely put the young and reformable criminal in festering contact with the old-timer. I'm for stern measures for gangsters."

"And I believe that capital punishment is necessary, even with a temporarily crazed man like Professor Snook, who actually thought he was defending his own life and family by killing Theora Hix, his paramour, when she called him from a golf game and threatened to expose him. Murderers pass and execute sentence of death upon."

SIX ARE HURT IN AUTO CRASH

PITTSBURGH.—Six persons were reported recovering today from injuries received yesterday when the automobile in which they were riding plunged off Liberty-rd. near Castle Shannon, and crashed into a stone wall.

The automobile was driven by Thomas McDermott, 37, of Nema-cohn. He and five members of his family, and Ruth Haney, 20, received minor cuts and bruises. McDermott said that an approaching motor truck forced him off the road.

VOGUE CHANGING IN POTATO PACKAGING

The use of small consumer packages of potatoes is becoming more popular, according to C. W. Hauck, marketing specialist for the department of rural economies at the Ohio State University.

Small, attractive, branded packages, containing uniform quantities of well graded potatoes are meeting increasing favor from the shipper, wholesaler, retailer, and consumer, Hauck declares.

So far, Hauck believes, no Ohio potatoes have been prepared for market in this fashion, yet the practice is having its effect on the marketing of the Ohio-grown product. The sale of potatoes in bulk, or in unbranded baskets and bags, is now not only difficult but generally unprofitable. So it is probable that the time is not distant when several of the progressive Ohio producers will undertake to reclaim some of the premium market, and, in Hauck's opinion, it can be done only by offering uniformly high quality potatoes in branded packages.

Hauck calls attention to a recent announcement from California. Potato growers and shippers in the Stockton district there have constructed a washing and packaging plant for Burbank potatoes at Los Angeles. The potatoes are washed, dried, graded and packed in ten-pound paper bags in one operation.

BAER TO MEET TOM LOUGHRAN

West Coast Fighter To Be Given Test Friday Night at New York Garden.

By LES CONKLIN

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Boxing fans should learn the Baer truth about Maxie Adelbert, pride of the California Baers, in the coast slugger's bout with Tommy Loughran at Madison Square Garden on Friday night.

Loughran, the master boxer, will furnish a splendid foil for the untrained, but game, cowpuncher, who came out of the West a couple of months ago heralded as a second Jack Dempsey. If Baer can knock out the former light heavyweight champion, he will take rank with the first flight heavyweights.

Even after two fights in the East, Max remains something of a fistie enigma. Against Ernie Schaaf, one of the best of the younger heavyweights, Baer showed that he could punch as well as take it, although he lost the decision.

The Californian tired badly in the latter half of his brawl with Schaaf, with result that many critics branded him a five-round fighter. Consequently he started slowly against Tom Heeneey in his next bout, determined to rate himself along for a strong finish. Old Tom, however, lit into Baer from the opening gong, and was in front on points when he was counted out due to a silly mixup between referee Jack Dempsey and the timekeepers.

Despite Baer's fluky victory, several competent ring experts are still convinced that he has the makings of a champion. They contend he would have opened up and beaten Heeneey, had the fight lasted.

When the Loughran fight was first made, it was thought to be a bad match for Baer. But Tommy was none too impressive a week ago in his bout with Jack Gross. A trial horse. Originally the fight was declared a draw, but the next day the referee discovered he had made a mistake in adding up his slip, and the decision was awarded to Loughran. The crowning laugh came when the Pennsylvania commission suspended Tommy.

Thus both Baer and Loughran have won farcical victories in their last starts. If the boxing commission has the foresight to equip the referee and timekeepers with adding machines and a cheerleader to keep the knockdown count in union, Friday night's performance should switch from comedy to drama.

Schaaf floored Loughran and cut him to ribbons in Philadelphia last year, but was barely able to eke out a decision over Baer. Judged from this angle, Maxie has at least an even chance against Tommy. In fact, a few wagers placed today made the Californian the favorite at 6 to 2.

VOICES TO SPAN ANOTHER OCEAN

Telephone Routes Are Planned For the Pacific

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company has applied for a construction permit to erect a short wave radio station in California as the first step in its program of extending transoceanic telephone service into the Pacific region.

The station is designed to connect the United States with various countries bordering the Pacific and its island groups as radio telephone stations are equipped in the distant countries. As the demand for service develops, Bell System telephones will be connected with one after another of the far eastern nations through a combination of land wires and short wave radio transmission.

When service is established, it means that patrons of The Ohio Bell Telephone Company will be able to span another ocean with their conversations.

As now planned, the first regular service will be provided to the island of Oahu in the Hawaiian group. By 1932, it is expected that all subscribers of the Mutual Telephone Company of Honolulu will be within the voice range of the United States telephones.

Telephone administrations of other countries in the Pacific area have likewise expressed an interest in the proposed service. In time it is probable that direct telephone connections will be established with Australia, Japan and others of the more important far eastern nations.

INTEREST IN RACE LEAPS

Automobile Manufacturers Renewing Efforts In View of May 30 Event.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—American automobile manufacturers, following the lead of better foreign motor builders are renewing their interest in the 500-mile races at the Indianapolis motor speedway.

With the advent last year, and continuation this May of two man cars powered with motors approximating the size of power plants in motor cars seen on the street today, the automotive industry again turns to the speedway as its basic laboratory.

The Indianapolis Speedway, used for racing only one day each year—on May 30, when the International 500-mile race is held—is in daily use this year by factory engineers who are everlastingly testing new appliances designed to refine motor car transportation.

Smart racing observers see in the return of factory interest in the Indianapolis Speedway, an indication that many factories will have either official or unofficial entries in the 500-mile race in May.

Last year, it is recalled, there were several stock contrivances in the contest. One of them finished in the money. In several instances where stock cars were used, the factory gave no official sanction. In several instances where stock cars were used, the factory gave no official sanction. But as soon as the race was ended, factory engineers took the car to a garage and dissected it as completely as a class of medical students fondle their first cadaver.

Marmón, Stutz, Duesenberg, Huppball, Nash, Perfect Circle Piston Ring Company, Long Manufacturing Company of Detroit, Standard Oil Company, are among those who are conducting tests on the Indianapolis track.

The winter weather has not halted the persistent tests of the engineers. The golf course at the speedway long has been closed and only a handful of workmen scurry about the gigantic plant to work on physical preparations for next year's race, which already have begun.

Because of the increased activity at the track, T. E. Myers, general manager of the speedway, is moving his home to the track so that he can be in constant touch with all operations. Previously he lived at the track only during the two months preceding each race. "There is more activity at the history," according to Myers, track now than ever before in its

FARM PRODUCTS DISTRIBUTION AT BOTTOM OF DEPRESSION?

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2.—The breakdown in the machinery for distribution of farm products is at the bottom of the prevailing economic depression, in the opinion of Sam H. Thompson, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation. Speaking at the twelfth annual meeting of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation here today, held in connection with the nineteenth annual Farmers' Week at the Ohio State University, Thompson declared that if the economic condition of agriculture could be improved by improvements of this distribution system, business in general would soon be back on a sound base.

One principal reason for the economic depression, Mr. Thompson held, is the fact that agriculture, the basic industry, has been out of balance with the other economic units of the national life. Although admitting that there is a very genuine market surplus of farm products which cannot be sold with profit to the producer, he voiced vigorous opposition to the prevailing opinion that agriculture's troubles are due to overproduction.

He sketched economic changes which have contrived to inject numerous middlemen between the producer and the consumer, and asserted that when millions of Americans are now in need of food, although without the wherewithal to get it, and other millions are desiring the products of the hungry city workers, talk of a surplus of agricultural commodities is superfluous.

"The breakdown," he charged, "is in distribution. Somewhere between the farm and the factory, the factory and the farm, the distribution system fails to function and the result is the condition of today."

A surplus crop control program based on voluntary acreage reduction by the individual farmers will not be successful, nor is it economically sound, Mr. Thompson held. In a business, where weather, insect pests, plant diseases and other conditions control output, no system of acreage reduction will insure an adequate price for the product, he pointed out.

"The solution of the agricultural problem," said Mr. Thompson, "rests not in mass statistics but in the situation of the individual farmer on his own farm. And yet I agree wholeheartedly with the Federal Farm Board and the Department of Agriculture that there must be diversification of crops, particularly wheat and cotton."

Prizes Cow Test

J. C. McDowell, dairyman for the United States Department of Agriculture, lauded the work being done by the dairy herd improvement associations in Ohio and elsewhere. This work is having a tremendous influence, he said, in the building up of better and more profitable dairy herds in every section of the country. Cows on test are producing about 60 per cent more milk and butterfat than those not on test.

A tabulation of the records of purebred and grade dairy cattle all over the United States showed that purebreds excelled grades by 11 per cent in the production of milk, by 9 per cent in the production of butterfat, and by 15 per cent in income over the cost of feed. A comparison of the records shows there is no best breed of dairy cattle, McDowell declared. But within the breed the big cows excelled the medium-sized and small cows for each breed and for each age in each breed.

Why Eggs Don't Hatch

R. M. Bethke, a research worker in poultry for the Ohio Experiment Station, explained to the poultry meetings why some eggs won't hatch. Disease, inbreeding, incubation, etc., are factors which naturally affect hatchability, he said, but in the main, however, if 50 or 60 per cent of the eggs fail to hatch, the poultryman must look to his ration to improve the hatching power of his eggs. Extensive investigation at the Ohio Experiment Station prove that milk in some form, or a green feed, like scheduled for the Farm Bureau meeting. Roy F. Bergengren, executive secretary of the Credit Union National Extension Bureau, Boston, will speak this afternoon, and P. F. Luckinger, divisional director of the Federal Land Bank of Omaha, will speak tomorrow.

A credit union bill, sponsored by the Ohio Farm Bureau, was introduced in the general assembly last week and the legislature has taken first steps toward solving the tax problem in inaugurating a special committee of nine to draft a new state tax system.

The general agriculture situation will be discussed by E. H. Hubbard, chairman of agricultural economics Department, University of Wisconsin.

One of the most important problems facing the state's agriculturists is that of finding better farming methods to combat such adverse conditions as drought.

J. C. Willard, noted agricultural expert, will address the convention on "Unusual Behavior of Crops in the Drouth."

Farmers' Week and the Farm Bureau meeting were opened jointly this morning by Dean Alfred H. Vivian of the college of agriculture, L. B. Palmer, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau organization, gave the opening address and advocated the adoption of the four-year term of state officials. He declared the four-year term would provide more efficient government. Gov. George White and Director of Agriculture I. S. Guthery also were on the program of today's farm bureau sessions.
